

Taylor Morrison

HIGHLIGHTS

Led operations for a startup that doubled in size

Married to her high school sweetheart

Developed a Global Facilitation Strategy

Was an All-American Dancer

Facilitated for multiple Fortune 500 companies

Taylor Morrison started her career in Allstate's Leadership Development Program. Through the program, Taylor strategically contributed to Allstate's employee culture, diversity and inclusion, and change management efforts. She then joined a startup as their first full-time employee and Vice President of Operations before returning to Allstate to help lead employee culture at their startup, Arity. Taylor's intentional facilitation approach encourages participants to bring their insights beyond the session and into their daily lives. For her, it's important that each session supports a client's business objectives.

Taylor is experienced in working with global and multicultural organizations. She is well-versed in creating an effective virtual facilitation experience. Taylor has a Bachelor's of Science from Vanderbilt University in Human and Organizational Development, a concentration in Leadership and Organizational Effectiveness, and a second major in Spanish.
